

NYS legislators introduced 13,375 bills during the 2023-24 session. How many actually became law?

New York State legislators introduce bills for a variety of reasons: They're personally interested, they want to appease special interests, donors, and constituents, or they want press. But passing bills is hard. Reinvent Albany crunched the data from the 2023-24 legislative session and found that only 11% of the bills introduced were ultimately signed by the Governor.
